

MISS MARJORIE LAKE AND THE DANCING PIPPINS AT THE NEW NEVADA THEATER NEXT WEEK.

The Lewis and Lake Musical comedy company who open at the New Nevada theater Monday night come to Tonopah a highly recommended attraction and will no doubt find a warm place in the hearts of the show going public of this city. This company will present for their opening bill, "The $10,000 Beauty," a rollicking musical comedy, interspersed with the late musical numbers by a clever chorus of excellent singers. Miss Lake's electrical swing song in the second act furnishes something seldom seen in an attraction of this kind. The five electric lighted swings swinging clear over the heads of the audience. The Lewis and Lake company will be at the Nevada theater all next week, with a change of bill every other night. Seats are now on sale at the Miners' Drug store. Prices, 25c, 50c and 75c.

RECRUITING OFFICER PLACED UNDER ARREST

Sergeant J. D. Bauer, of the United States marine corps, in charge of the local recruiting office in the Virginia hotel was placed under arrest this morning by Chief of Police Burke, charged with violating a city ordinance in placing a sign upon a sidewalk within the city limits, says the Reno Gazette.

Bauer accompanied the chief to the city hall, where he was immediately released upon his own recognizance, pending a hearing of the case next Monday. A test case will be made of this. Bauer placed one of the regular sign boards of the United States government which calls for recruits for the navy upon the sidewalk at the curb on North Virginia street. Chief Burke saw it and ordered its removal, with which demand Sergeant Bauer refused to comply.

This morning the officer of Uncle Sam placed the sign again at the same place and the arrest followed. Bauer immediately notified Lieutenant J. W. McCloskey, whose headquarters are at San Francisco, and that officer started for this city this morning, for the purpose of making a test of the ordinance in respect to such matters pertaining to the government service.

COATSHIRTS ARE ALL THE GO THIS SUMMER

The firm of McKim and company have received a complete and up to date line of summer negligee shirts. The shipment is composed of all kinds from the softest to the pleated bosom.

All are of the coat-shirt variety, and the styles are of the latest. The shipment was ordered by McKim on his recent visit to the coast and he had a splendid opportunity to select from a large line of samples.

THE SONG OF THE PROSPECTOR

(By Will J. Dooly, Salt Lake.)
The world is my home, for wherever I roam,

I live where my poverty pleases; No rent-setting day, and no taxes to pay;

No signing of long-winded leases. My palace is built with a blanket and quilt,

My roof is the star-studded sky; While boiled beans and bacon, three times a day taken,

Are as filling as beefsteak and pie.

If the diet is greasy, the housework is easy,

And the lodging is airy and free. So I don't give a dern for any dern man,

Who don't give a dern for me.

I can hit a good lick with a hammer and pick,

And feast upon coffee and hard-tack;

If the dirt doesn't pay, I'm off the next day.

On the hurricane deck of an old jack.

I have prospects and claims, with the most wonderful names,

All bulging with mythical riches; But promoters take fright, when they catch a first sight

Of the patch on the seat of my breeches.

The copper's a stain—there's no fissure vein—

The gold's not rebellious nor free.

Still I don't give a dern for any derm man, Who don't buy a claim from me.

When my jack takes a hike down the long desert pike,

Your high stepping steed isn't in it.

On a mountainside course, the Arabian horse,

I can skin a whole block in a minute.

I am ragged and rough-bearded, sun-burnt and tough,

My follies are harmless and human;

I'll down a strong bumper, or shoot a claim-jumper,

But don't say "no" to a woman.

With any poor sinner I'll share my lone dinner,

The red-eye and cut plug are free.

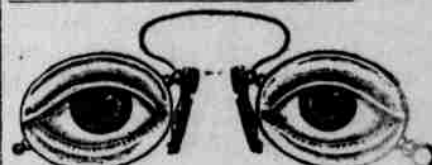

But I don't give a dern for any dern man,

Who don't give a dern for me.

ST. LOUIS, May 21.—Nearly 300,000 babies under one year of age die every year in the United States, according to a statement of Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, Jr., associate professor of pediatrics in the Johns Hopkins Medical school of Baltimore, in a paper read before the National Conference of Charities and Corrections here this morning.

But what was more startling than these figures, was the further statement that with proper care, probably one-half these deaths could be prevented. Dr. Knox said in part:

"A most significant feature of the civic life of our generation is the development of the idea of neighborliness. The two fundamental elements in this relationship are real need and adequate help."

Dr. Geo. P. DeVine

Will be at the Mizpah hotel from the 23rd to the 25th.
